

INTRODUCTION

The brutal murder of a sixth-year medical student at the Moi University has raised concerns on the insecurity status of Universities in Kenya.

This latest incident falls right into the series of mysterious killings and attacks on University students reported since the start of February 2019 at Kirinyaga University, Moi University, University of Nairobi, and Jomo Kenyatta University of Agriculture and Technology.

In efforts to reassure students of their safety, various school authorities have called upon the security agencies to crackdown instances of insecurity in higher learning institutions.
